Master of Intercultural Mediation: Identities, Mobilities, Conflicts (Leuven)

Master of Science

Blue Nude is one of Pablo Picasso's master piece in his early years. It was painted in 1902 and after one of his close friend tragically died, he mourned over it for a long time and was in a depressive mode. It is one of Picasso's paintings during his blue period and has without a doubt proved Picasso's talent on highlighting the deepest emotions while using only one color to effectively express it.

Master of Intercultural Mediation: Identities, Mobilities, Conflicts (uitdovend programma vanaf 2017-2018) (120 ECTS)

Education

Do you have an interest in intercultural mediation and a desire to travel to far-flung places? The Erasmus Mundus Master in Intercultural Mediation: Identities, Mobilities, Conflicts (MITRA) is your portal! MITRA offers a 24-month programme of study in (at least) two European and non-European countries. Participating countries include: Belgium, France, Ireland, Romania, Senegal, Mexico, Poland and Brazil. Students receive comprehensive training in intercultural mediation, taught at an advanced academic level, and have the opportunity to apply this training in fieldwork. MITRA aims to prepare a new generation of experts in migration, integration and management of cultural and linguistic diversity, with a particular emphasis on ethics. Depending on the chosen curriculum, students will be granted a dual or triple Master's degree.

The Erasmus Mundus Master in Intercultural Mediation: Identities, Mobilities, Conflicts is an initial Master's programme. You can follow this programme on a full-time or part-time basis.

Objectives

The Erasmus Mundus Master "Mitra" is a bilingual interdisciplinary master in intercultural mediation which offers an excellent training in 4 semesters. The master's programme which is the result of the cooperation in the framework of the international MITRA consortium (of which KU Leuven is one of the 8 academic members) offers a specialization in the topics of identities, migration, mobility, integration, inclusion, conflicts and management of cultural and linguistic diversity. Both Europe as well as the world outside Europe are the domains under study. Academic study is completed by field work which is an important element in the programme.

8 academic members: Université de Lille (France), KU Leuven (Belgique), University College Cork (Irlande), Université Babes-Bolyai (Roumanie), Université de Wrocław (Pologne), Université Cheikh Anta Diop de Dakar (Sénégal), Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México (Mexique), Université Fédérale de Rio de Janeiro (Brésil)

MITRA is an integrated and interdisciplinary Master's programme situated in the human and social sciences that aims at instructing current and future specialists working on the policy of crisis and conflict situations and the management of diversity and territories.

Graduates of the programme possess the following knowledge and skills:

- an understanding of the foundations of interdisciplinary theories on intercultural mediation and the dynamics of territories, and an ability to apply them in practice;
- an ability to use participatory, analytical and policy methodologies in the field of intercultural mediation and the dynamics of territories;
- an ability to interpret and valorise context-related trends that determine diversity policy;
- an ability to evaluate projects presented by different organisations (among which NGO's and governmental institutes);
- an ability to give advice in the field of negotiations and mediation in conflict and crisis situations;
- an ability to provide expertise in the field of intercultural mediation and the guidance of delocalised persons and groups;
- an ability to assure an effective policy in the whole of relations within organisations and national and international institutes that work on mobility.
